Turnkey opportunity with a brand new roof, 5.5 fully updated bathrooms, renovated third floor and solid foundation! This South of Broad stunner is set within one of Charleston's most prestigious and picturesque neighborhoods. Rich in history, this historic home was once owned and most likely built by D.C. Barbot, the notable engineer associated with the structural framing of the People's Building, Charleston's first "skyscraper" and the historic Cathedral of St. John the Baptist! This stately English Tudor-inspired residence offers 5 bedrooms and 5.5 baths, pairing timeless architectural character with elevated, thoughtfully designed interiors. A gracious entry welcomes you into an expansive living room adorned with coffered ceilings, creating a sense of depth and refinement. Just beyond, a formal dining room anchored by a fireplace and sophisticated designer wall coverings sets the tone for elegant entertaining. The spacious gourmet kitchen is both functional and beautiful, offering ample room for gathering, while a charming powder room is discreetly tucked beneath the staircase. From the main level, step onto the large screened porch--an inviting extension of the living space--perfect for enjoying Charleston's coastal breezes, whether hosting guests or unwinding with a quiet morning coffee. The second floor introduces a versatile flex space
